Hi Kids,

Oh where, oh where has Merle been hiding? In case you didn't notice the last two issues of this rag were missing from your mailbox. I wish I had some great excuse for not publishing ,but the truth is I just have too many things to do and not enough hours in the day to get them all done. Thus, I was MIA, missing in action. It really doesn't happen too often and I do pride myself on keeping a regular schedule but hey, sometimes things happen. Of all things, it might teach you to appreciate me now (LOL).

I'd like to say the weather here in Ohio has improved but I'd be lying. It seems more like fall then spring, chilly, mostly in the 50's and some rain mixed in off and on. It's been wreaking havoc with my sinuses lately. My face has been killing me. Yea, yea, I know that old joke, it's killing you too <grin> I never had these problems when I was younger but the older I get the more physical ailments seem to crop up. What fun it is getting older. Makes you wonder what tomorrow will bring. Maybe I'll wake up and my head will have fallen off. Ok, maybe that's a bit extreme but you never know.

My friend got a new dog. It's a Schnauzer. Since I have two dogs whom I refer to as "the boys" I tried to enlighten her on how having a dog is just like having kids. Just as much work and responsibility. The only difference is you can lock your dog in a cage and leave the house, not something I would advise you to do with children. I do love my dogs, they are the sweetest and most loyal friends I belive any human can have and if you've never owned a dog who was your best friend you're really missing out on a great life experience. "Dogs for all my friends".

Our house is still a mess, under construction zoning. I'm still sleeping in the living room which is very strange but I'm getting use to it. Dry walling has begun and it's starting to look like a house again. It's still a long way off from being finished but we're working on it.

Memorial weekend is coming up fast. I have to work Sunday and Monday night so I won't be having too much fun so if you have something planned, like a picnic or special outing, please have some fun for me then write to me and tell me what I did and how much fun I had. (LOL)

Are you a bubble wrap popper? I am. For some reason every time I see the little buggers I have to pop em. Now I can do it online, no package needed.

"Need Help? You Might Want to Consider Outsourcing"

by Merle http://MCPromotionsPress.com

Running your own online business can take a lot of your time. You have to wear many hats and perform many tasks: including accounting, web design,marketing and promotion. This is not to mention constantly coming up with new content for your site or to distribute it in article format for free publicity.

There are only so many hours in the day and to be honest, one person can only do so much. So what's the answer? I have one word for you: "outsourcing." This is where you hire someone else to perform a specific job or task for you. Outsourcing frees up time you can spend on more valuable aspects of your web business.

So what kinds of things might you want to farm out? Great question! Customer service can take up a lot of time; answering emails, dealing with technical problems or billing issues. Imagine the freedom of assigning those aspects of your business to someone else. If you want to offer live customer support on your website, there are companies that will serve up 24/7 live operators to answer any questions your site visitors may have when you can't be around to answer them yourself.

How about software creation? If this is the field you're in or one you'd like to enter but aren't a programmer yourself, you can hire top notch techies to write the stuff for you. Some will work for pennies on the dollar. Imagine having a top notch software package you can own and sell -- and keep all the profits.

How are your writing skills? An online entrepreneur need ads, articles, press releases and other written items to promote the business. And if you'd like to offer free or paid ebooks and reports, you'll need to be a pretty good writer. So what if you never paid attention in English class? Hire someone to do it for you. There are plenty of talented writers online who are looking daily for assignments such as this. When the work is done it bears your name on the finished product.

Running marketing and ad campaigns such as Pay Per Click advertising can take up a ton of time, with all that testing and tracking. Again, this is another area you can farm out.

Ever have an idea for a new website but never took the time to research it? This happens to many busy entrepreneurs. So many projects, so little time. Research is another area you may want to consider letting someone else do for you.

So now that you know how outsourcing can help you to become more productive, where do you find people to hire? Fortunately, there are plenty of sites that exist for you to post your job needs -- and plenty of hungry freelancers who will come to bid on your jobs. This works especially well for those on a budget who have a firm idea of what they can afford to spend.

Let's examine a few of your options:

1) RentACoder: http://RentACoder.com

Review resumes and work histories of over 96,577 registered coders. Post your needs, and coders will email you their bids. Posting a job request is free and you are under no obligation to accept any bids unless you decide to. When you accept a bid, the money is put into escrow and not released to the programmer until the job is finished.

2) Elance: http://www.Elance.com

Outsource your small projects such as graphic design, logos, web development, writing and more. Select a category and describe your project. You'll need to authenticate yourself by inputting a credit card. There is no charge to post a job in the "basic level" but there is a refundable fee to post in the "select level." You'll receive bids on your job and then select a winner.

3) Smarter Work: http://SmarterWork.com

Post your project in one or more of many categories to choose from, such as administrative support, graphic design, translation, research, software and more. They have over 70,000 clients and service providers from over 170 countries. It's free to register.

4) PHP Career: http://www.PHPCareer.com

If you have a PHP related job then this is where you'll want to post it. Free of charge to post your job needs, but donations are appreciated.

5) Guru: http://www.Guru.com

Free access to over 451,000 professionals with over 160 categories to choose from. Post in website design, graphic design, photography, writing and programming and more. Fee is 5 to 10% of project fee which is deducted from the final payment. You'll receive quotes and be able to select the applicant of your choice.

6) WorkAHolics4Hire: http://workaholics4Hire.com

With this service you'll be assigned your very own "project manager." You get to see the work in progress and review it to make sure it meets your needs. You'll need to contact them for a free assessment of your needs.

7) Fr-e-eLanceWorkExchange: http://tinyurl.com/759ap

Post a project for a wide variety of jobs and get responses from qualified work at home pros. Post all the jobs you want with no transaction fees. You may have your listing placed higher for a fee of $20.00. Categories range from writing, web design, Internet research, data entry, programming, and graphic design.

8) FreeLance Writing: http://FreeLanceWriting.com

If you need a writer, this is the place to look. Provides companies with a handful of free tools to locate freelancers. They also offer industry news, job opportunities, editorial content, and networking opportunities.

When posting your job on one of these sites you'll want to make sure you give very specific detailed instructions as to your project needs. If you're vague, you may get applicants who can't do the job or who don't meet your qualifications.

Many small businesses are outsourcing their needs in order to keep up with the many tasks and challenges they face as online entrepreneurs. If you find you can't keep pace with your many online tasks, you may want to consider it as an option.
